| C6.5 (new) | To support the implementation of Regulation A2.4, for flexible programmes of study approved to permit students to pace study through module enrolment (typically Global Online programmes), continuation decisions may be permitted within a stage of study. Students may be permitted to progress to the next module or set of modules carrying a failure in no more than 20 credits. In agreeing this, Programme Assessment Boards must be satisfied that the student's academic potential is sufficiently strong, based on their academic profile, that the student has a reasonable chance of success in progressing. The principle of allowing students to proceed with credits pending if they are considered able to benefit and succeed should also apply to |                                                        | QS(25/26)33                   |
